Revenge is often responsible for murder, torture and embarrassment, though some claim it is one of the highest pleasures.

"Revenge is the sweetest indulgence. It can make you absorb a level of satisfaction that even the most pure love challenges," said Mandy Martin, a lawyer from Charleston, SC. "I've never understood the myth and general assumption that women crave it the most. It may be true, but when a man is lusting revenge, things become more dangerous."

The Spite Site is a collaborative effort between a married couple whose own personal experiences and experiences of people they know warranted a non-threatening outlet to communicate frustration, anger and general displeasure with certain life situations.

"While many people would love the opportunity to tell friends, relatives, coworkers and other people whom they interact with how they 'really' feel, it isn't always an option," said The Spite Site team public relations via e-mail. "As a result, The Spite Site was created to allow people to anonymously vent and find some means of cathartic relief. Additionally, as the site was built out, several products were added to complement our trademarked line of pejorative greeting cards (Nasty Grams™)."

The message on the cards varies, so each customer can choose whichever serves their specific complaint. Vengeful statements include "You Were a Mistake," "No One Likes You" and "Nothing Tastes as Good as Skinny Looks."

On the bright side, the site also offers personal therapies to cool frustrations, such as the book "Porn For Women." The book contains 96 pages of photographs of men doing things like vacuuming, feeding their wives chocolate and washing dishes.

As a voodoo doll is a vengeful heart's favorite toy, the site introduces one which will be easier to use than a typical voodoo doll.

"A double-sided voodoo doll that will mirror the doll used in our site logo on one side of the doll with the other side's body as a mirror image but a picture frame face," said The Spite Site about a new doll available this year. "This will allow the purchaser to insert the photo of whomever they'd like to voodoo."

Revenge appeals to a wide range of people, making it a worthwhile product.

"I know all about revenge," said Matt Kidds, a tattoo artist and divorcee. "I've got good stories on the subject."

Kidds shared a story about a guy he tattooed.

The man met a woman during college, and they dated for years before getting engaged. The bride's parents spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to reserve the perfect spot. They found what they wanted, set a date and invited the guests.

When the big day finally arrived, more than 300 people arrived for the couple. Families and friends prepared for their toasts, cheers and well-wishes.

The guests filled the rows of white chairs in front of the stage where the speeches would be held.

After the best man gave his toast, the groom unexpectedly stood up.

"I want to thank you all for attending our wedding. I have been waiting for this day for a long time," he said.

"Everyone, please feel under the seat of your chair for a square shape taped up in the center."

The confused audience felt under their seats, and expressions of shock and disgust slowly spread through the room.

"If anyone is confused, please allow me to clarify," the smiling groom said. "That is a photo of my wife and my best man in a very consensual sexual position."

He turned to his wife at his right and said, "Screw you," then to his left, facing his best man and said, "And screw you. Have a good night."

He walked out to where his car, a packed bag and a ticket to Costa Rica waited.
